A diagram of a human dental arch, likely a maxillary (upper) arch, viewed from the front. The teeth are numbered 1 through 8 on both the left and right sides, starting from the central incisors (1) and moving towards the molars (8). A vertical line runs down the center, representing the midline. A horizontal line runs across the middle of the arch, separating the upper and lower arches. The teeth are depicted with detailed outlines showing their shapes and positions.
